

Dear Government-

I am very concerned about the fact that you are debating a proposal that would superimpose current state laws on telemarketing. I am currently signed up for the Indiana No-Call list, and I am extremely happy with my choice. I have not gotten a telemarketing call ever since I signed up on the no-call list. It is a good thing that you wish to have a national telemarketing law, but the law that you are proposing is very lax, and it would be quite useless. Please, either do not endorse a national telemarketing law, or endorse a much more stringent one. I, as a person living in this great country, value my rights, and I wish not for telemarketers to trample on them, and your proposal would let them. Remember two things- 1) the states are doing the right thing, and they know more about who they govern than the national government does, and 2) the telemarketing proposal, if passed, would be a blemish to your credit. Therefore, rethink any decision endorsing this national telemarketing proposal, and please do not pass it.

Asha Agrawal